The Iron Trade of the World. The annual production of orude iron roughout the world is estimated at 6,000,tons. Of this Great Britain produces 3,-1000, France 750,000, Prussia 300,000. tria 250,000, Belgium 200,000, Russia 000 Sweden 150,000, the lesser German tates 100,000, the United States 750,000. and other countries 300,000.

It is thus seen that one-half of the iron of world issues from the forges of Great Briain, and that the amount produced in the nited States-although large, as compared with others countries -is small when contrascontinue? Those who are best informed verable locations are at present fully occupied, and that if the iron trade of Great Briain is destined to a further increase, it must e by bringing into use the iron deposits of reland, which have hitherto been, for the nost part, entirely neglected.

In the United States, on the contrary, the leposits are on so gigantic a scale and are so inversally diffused, that a production, such s that at present enjoyed by England, would carcely make an impression upon them .-

It appears by a letter from General Wiliam Walker, that the statement made by that leader in some of his public speeches, touching certain derogatory counsel given to him "by a member of the Cabinet," (the Seretary of War,) was made, not on his own nowledge and authority, but on the infornation of one of his officers; and, so far, the evelation now made by the General goes to weaken the evidence on which the storynever very probable-rested.

By the arrival of the India it will be seen hat we have advices from Europe, with inrmation of the return of the Agamemnon o England, after a cruise of five days midcean in search of the Niagara. A further attempt is projected, and measures to that end were in progress. The general news is not of much importance.

Senator Hunter inclines to the opinion that the existing tariff will soon yield revenue enough, in connexion with the proceeds from the public lands, to meet all the liabilities of an economical administration of the Government, whose expenses, he thinks, might be reduced to sixty millions per annum!

The New York Wheat Crop. The Rochester Union says that reports as to the state of the wheat crop in that and other adjoining counties are conflicting. An old miler, who has travelled some within a week, about the Genesee Valley and in Genesee county, says the wheat harvest has commenced, and the weld is a fair one. He states that the mischief done by the weevil is slight, and far less than was anticipated. Another miller has letters from different parts of the valley, which tend to confirm the statement of the one first named -The quantity of wheat raised thereabouts will be small, compared with some previous years, and a far less breadth of ground was sown.

Coal Trade. The anthracite coal trade continues very inactive, and the shipments of the season show a heavy falling off. Including the Shamokin and Wyoming regions and the Scranton trade north, the decrease on Anthracite coal this year will teach at least 350,000 tons so far. The bituminous coal trade has also fallen off nearly

The money supply at New York still presses spon the market, though some capitalists are reserving their means rather than to loan them at the present low rates, believing that the time is not far distant when the market must take a better turn for the lender.

A Troublesome Family.

They have a family named Loomis, in Oneida County, who manage to get more notoriety, and to occupy a larger share of public attention, than any other people in that part of the State. How many there are of them we do not know, but this we have learned, that the Lomises are constantly in some form before the Courts-sometimes, and indeed generally, as defendants, charged with crimes of various kinds, as stealing, forsome prominent capacity. We are not sure whether any of them have ever been convictged with that of Great Britain. Is this likely ed. They seem to have a way of jumping out of second story windows, of breaking upon this subject, are of the opinion that most jail, of running away from officers on fleet horses, and in various other modes dodging the administration of justice. As a last resort, when one of them gets cornered, and no way seems open for escape, the District Attorney is knocked down and robbed of the indictment, after which the culprit walks abroad with impunity .-- N. An Emancipation Case in Georgia

The Macon Telegraph of Tuesday says: On yesterday morning Judge Lampkin delivered an opinion involving an eman-cipation clause in a will in a case of this kind, A., the testator, had made a will in which he bequeathed certain negroes for life to B. After the death of B the negroes were to be free, and carried to a free State or to Liberia. The Court decided that this clause in the will was void under our emancipation acts; that the negroes were free co instanti the termination of the life estate in Georgia, and as a matter of course, contrary to the spirit and policy of our laws in relation to emancipating slaves.

OBITUARY.

DIED, at the residence of his parents, on the 5th inst., WILLIAM, eldest child of Reverdy A. and Harriet A. Rennoe, aged five years and eight months. We fain would say a few words in an effort to portray the attractive traits which adorned the life of this bright boy. We would gladly, most gladly, suggest a few reflections which might tend at least to heal the crushed hearts of sorrowing mourners, who linger around his hallowed grave. Possessed of vigorous constitution, gay and elastic spirits, his instinctive, innocent gambols, his ruddy cheek, his merry laugh, his generous disposition while they carried present gladness to his parents' doting hearts, gave promise of a future life on earth, alike honorable to him and comforting to them-such a life as a mother's love and a father's pride loved so well to paint and But with his life, like dew-drops from a faded bud, have fallen these sweet assomens from on high, issued by the Ruler of all nominations, were earnest and attentive. the earth, whose councils though veiled in mystery, are prompted by mercy, hath called his spirit from earth to Heaven. Important Prosecution. We learn that the city authorities bave commenced an action against one of the wealthy citizens of Worcester for an alleged fraudulent concealment of his property from the assessors. It is alleged that for three successive years he has, just previous to the first of May, made a sham transfer of two hundred and eighty-nice shares of the Providence and Worcester Railroad into other hands and a few days after rendering his valuation to the assessors, minus the transferred shares, has taken them back again. thus saving for the time, several bundred dollars upon his tax bill.

The penalty for such subterfage and concealment of property is, according to the THE DEDICATION of the new Pres statute, the forfeiture of one half the par val $14,450, one half of the forfeiture to go to the town or city in which the party resides, and the remainder to the person who furnishes the information which leads to conviction. From the manner in which the acthorities have gone into the matter, we judge monthly meeting of the members of the Young | that they are determined to test the question fully, whether the rich man shall, by decent and artifice, evade the payment of the taxes for the support of the government, and thus increase the burdens of the poor .- Worcester
